ABILITY AND NATIONAL SENTIMENTS—NEL-SON, ETHERIDGE, AND ANDERSON—REASON FOR DEMOCRATIC HATE. respondence of The N. Y. Tribune.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26, 1859.

One of the first facts that will strike an observer of the present House of Representatives, in its desultory and disorganized struggle, is the extraordinary tact and high mental ability of the so-called South Americans." The Democracy have been from the beginning of the session extremely bellicose. Like the roaring "bulls of Bashan" they have pushed their horns in every direction for an antagonist. The Republicans, in the confidence of assured power, have left the Democratic champions to exhaust their breath in bellowing over the uncontested field. But, resolved on having an adversary and a fight, these cornuted knights have made a dash at anything crossing the arena; and now and then the recklesss invader of the campus has been a South American member, who has met such enemies before, and is not at all alarmed at the terrible amount of sound that heralds their presence and heir attack amount of sound that heraids their presence and their attack.

Nearly every intellectual and moral battle on the floor of the House so far—John Hickman's memorable wrestling with the powers of darkness being the most noted exception—has been between the Democrats and the South Americans, and it is universally admitted that in every case the South Americans have come off with the laurels of victory. In the beginning Mr. Nelson of Tennessee, in one dashing and brilliant charge, overthrew the Virdashing and brilliant charge, overthrew the Vir-ginia knight, Roger A. Pryor, and left him wallow-ing in the dust, where the victorious champion had first trampled John B. Clark's resolutions, which were the red flag that began the fight. Pryor, who was previously the most "irrepressible" patriot in the House, became from that time a quiet school boy, chewing the cud of bitter discontent on a back eat after punishment.

Scarcely a day has passed since that memorable disaster to the irrepressible Democrats, without the casting of a stone by some one of their speakers into the camp of the South Americans. In most cases, it has been picked up harmless, and hurled back with severe effect upon the Democratic ranks; and generally, it has fallen to the lot of that versatile political fighter, that gallant champion of popular rights, the Hon. Emerson Etheridge of Tennessee, to retort upon the assailants of the South American eat after punishment. pointer inglet, that game to report upon the assailants of the South American party and policy. It is enough to say, that the collected and calm Etheridge has not yet made a mistake, nor failed to bring his adversary down helpless at his feet, exposing at once to the House and to the country, the weakness of his armor and the badness of his cause. The country has much to hope from the high talents, and national, all-embracing patriotism of Emerson Etheridge, and men like him, who can afford to despise the seifish and proscriptive policy within which the Democracy would cramp his nature and sentiments.

But the experience with Nelson and Etheridge did not suffice. The indiscretion of the Democrats aroused still a third champion of the Southern Oparty.

aroused still a third champion of the Southern Op-position, in the person of the Hon. Wm. C. Ander-son of the IVth District of Kentucky—a district son of the IVth District of Kentucky—a district that for the past ten years has been represented only by Democrats. Last week, when the Democrats failed to induce the Americans to vote for Gen. John S. Milson for Speaker, a Democrat, nominated by Alex. R. Botteler, the sole American representative from Virginia, the Hon. H. C. Burnett of Kentucky, one of the ablest men and best speakers of his party, took the floor and poured out a torrent of eloquent invective against the Americans, whose alliance had just been courted to aid in electing Millson, charging them with having decans, whose alliance had just been courted to aid in electing Millson, charging them with having deserted the flag of Heary Clay, and his principles, and with having converted the gallant old Whig party into a "miserable Know-Nothing party." Mr. Burnett addressed himself directly to Mr. Anderson as the Member representing the IVth District of Kentucky. On being thus singled out, Mr. Anderson rose and said, "I represent the IVth District of Kentucky." "For the present," was the sarcastic reply of Mr. Burnett, aliuding to the fact that Mr. Anderson's seat was contested.

Mr. Burnett, alinding to the fact that Mr. Anner son's seat was coutested.

"Yes, for the present," said Mr. Anderson, "and "I hope till the end of this Congress. However if, on examining all the facts in the case, it is no found that I have received a majority of the lega "votes cast in my District, I shall cheerfully aband on the seat I hold in this body."

Mr. Burnett's allusion to the tenure of his collegency seat was universally felt to be in exceeding Mr. Burnett's allumen to the tenure of his colleague's seat was universally felt to be in exceeding bad taste. His own friends felt it to be so. But Mr. Burnett made bad worse by proceeding to vindicate his allusion to it, and uttering an exparte statement, to the effect that "on the face of the treell-hooks Mr. Anderson was not elected to tory of the Republicans than Mr. Burnett, because they presented on the floor of the House the alarming fact of a united North. In Mr. Burnett's view, that was sectional and dangerous to the Union. And yet, said Mr. A., he wishes us of the Opposition to help make the South as unpatriotic and sectional as he says the North is! Mr. Anderson proclaimed that he was opposed to a united North, and for the same reason opposed to a united South. He was opposed to any and all political divisions based upon geographical lines, as highly dangerous to the peace and safety of the Union. He desired to be a representative of the whole country, and not of a section.

peace and safety of the Union. He desired to be a representative of the whole country, and not of a section.

But I do not wish to intrude too far on your crowded columns. These points and passages of Mr. Anderson's speech are sufficient to show the character of his logic, and the nationality of his sentiments. They received the cannest attention and cordial approval of every fair mind in the House, and of the thousands that heard him in the galleries. It is truly wholesome and refreshing to hear a bold, manly defense of national sentiments and old Whig principles in the midst of the storm of sectional strife that the Democrats have been raising and riding ever since Congress convened.

Mr. Burnett made a short but not effectual effort to relieve himself from the ungenerous and unjust assault he had made on his colleague. The result was, as I have premised, entirely in favor of one of the gallant and brilliant band of Southern Oppositionists in the House.

The explanation I have heard given of the fact of the striking superiority of the South Americans in Congress is this: The despotic power of Democracy in the South is so great—the prejudices they inculcate in regard to the Slavery question against their opponents so deep—that it requires extraordinary ability to resist the hue and cry about miggers," and to arouse the Southern voters to a knowledge that this cry is a deceit, intended to cover up the designs of the Democrate upon the offices and treasury of the Government.

The Southern Oppositionists, who expose these frauds of the Democracy to the Southern people, are met everywhere, here and at home, with the intense malignity of that party. They reach Congress, as Mr. Etheridge remarked of himself, through "a perfect cloud of calumnies." They have literally to fight their way through fire, and only the best and bravest spirits succeed. Hence the marked ability of those representatives of the better heart of the South, who have gathered such honors in the present House.

If Mr. Anderson is pursued even to the floor of the House, and his seat denied him by the prejudgment and ex parte assertions of the Democratic party, the reason will be found patent enough in the fact that, if they can oust him, they will have a majority of the Kentucky Members, and so obtain the vote of Kentucky in the House for the Democratic promines for President in case the election eratic nominee for President, in case the election should go before the House! Verily, the game is worth their candle. A WESTERN MAN.

THE HON. B. STANTON AND THE HON. H. F. CLARK.

AN EXPLANATION.

To the Editor of The N. Y. Tribuna.

Sir: As you have deemed my "pair" with Mr.

Horace F. Clark a matter of sufficient importance to justify you in noticing it editorially in THE TRIBUNE. of this morning, I trust you will do me the favor to publish a very brief statement of the circumstances under which it was made, and my reasons for mak-

Mr. Clark came to me in the Hall of the House on Saturday, and said that his mother was lying seriously or dangerously ill, in the City of New-York, and that he was very anxious to see her. That, owing to the peculiar position which he occupied in relation to the election of Speaker, he was peculiarly liable to the imputation of recking to avoid the responsibility of aiding the election of Mr. Sherman by his absence, while he was unwilling to vote for him, or to withhold while he was unwilling to vote for him, or to withhold his vote for the avowed purpose of aiding his election. He said he was determined never to place himself in such a position, and that, if he could not pair off with some friend of Mr. Sherman's, he would remain and vote as he had been doing, at any sacrifice of personal feeling.

That he bad endeavored to pair off with others whose personal relations to him ought, as he thought, to have secured him that favor. He seemed to be laboring under considerable excitement, on account of what he considered an attempt to punish him for pursuing the course he had deemed it his duty to take in the pendiage course.

ing contest.

I was aware of the existence of the feeling to which he referred, and know that if I paired with him I should subject myself to the consures and animalversions of my friends in the House, and probably through sions of my friends in the House, and probably through the newspapers.

I therefore went with Mr. Clark to a friend in the House in whose judgment and indelity to Mr. Shorman I had great confidence, and, upon full consultation and mature deliberation, we concluded that we bought to relieve Mr. Clark from his embarrassment, and that for that purpose I ought to pair off with him.

I, of course, did not know, nor did I deem it my duty to inquir , how many Republican or how many Democratic votes Mr. Clark had received when he was elected.

His course in the election of Speaker was a matter elected.

His course in the election of Speaker was a matter for his own consideration and determination, and he was responsible for it to his constituents, and is the country, and not to me; and I certainly did not then, and do not now, think it wise or magnanimous to attempt to coerce him into a change of his course, by refusing him the courtesies and civilities which, under imilar circumstances, would be extended to a political outponent.

"Yes, for the present," said Mr. Anderson, "and I hope till the end of this Congress. However if, on examining all the facts in the case, it is no found that I have received a majority of the lega votes cast in my District, I shall cheerfully abanded to the seat I hold in this body."

Mr. Burnett's allusion to the tenure of his coleague's seat was universally felt to be in exceeding and taste. His own friends felt it to be so. But Mr. Burnett made bad worse by proceeding to vindicate his allusion to it, and uttering an exparte statement, to the effect that "on the face of the "poil-books, Mr. Anderson was not elected to "Congress."

I am ready to answer to my constituents for my conduct, and an act my conduct and an act my conduct and the facts in the case, it is no friends, and I could find no reason callefactory to myself why I should refuse him so small a favor, when I knew it could not, by any possibility, prejudice the clection of a Republican Speaker.
